NOW IN CHICAGO

new & notable

Lynx offers a wide range of good-looking outdoor grills, including a new smoker that can be used by a smartphone via an app.

GREAT RANGE

FIRED UP

Viking Range, the stalwart appliance company synonymous with chef-style gas ranges, has been reborn courtesy of its parent company, Middleby Residential, which recently debuted the enhanced Viking Range series along with other innovative products at a new showroom at the Merchandise Mart.

"Appliances have now become the focal point of the kitchen," says Creative Director Jaime Laurita, who was tapped to design the new showrooms (another is currently under construction in New York) and build a sexier image for the storied brand. "There's a whole new energy at Viking, and we are turning up the gas," says Laurita, a trained chef who has appeared on Oprah and toured with artists such as Madonna and Sting as an ambience director.

Laurita's vision for the Viking flagship in the Mart features stunning vignettes that incorporate some of his favorite vendors in the building, such as Artistic Tile and Maya Romanoff. But behind the looks, the appliances powered by commercial cooking technology really stand out. Some of Laurita's favorites are the Viking TurboChef Speedcooker, an oven that he promises will get you out of the kitchen much faster; Viking GardenChef, a growing station that keeps herbs, microgreens and sprouts at the perfect temperature—"it's a womb of perfection," he says. "For someone who loves to juice, it has its own green thumb. Just load it and grow it"; the Napoli outdoor pizza oven and the Sonoma Smoker by Lynx that employs cutting-edge technology and can be paired with your smartphone to control heat and smoke.

Ranges by French manufacturer La Cornue (in bubblegum pink!) and products from AGA and U-Line—all part of the Middleby portfolio—appeal to the millennial as much as the established home chef.

Laurita's revamp of Viking includes fresh colors and styles, such as a concept matte black range with rose gold details that, based on oohing and aahing alone, is providing ample inspiration for designers and clients. "Viking is an old label with a new life," says Laurita of the company, which still makes its products in Mississippi. "I got to design with all the best ingredients and play with the new Viking equipment," he adds. "It's an experience center. This showroom is really fun and different." Middleby Residential/Viking/La Cornue, LuxeHome, 222 Merchandise Mart Plaza, Ste. 137, 312.374.3091, vikingrange.com —Zlata Kozul Naumovski

HOME ON THE RANGE

THE PARTY To fete the launch of Middleby Residential's brand-new showroom at the Merchandise Mart, guests toasted the transformed space while Creative Director Jaime Laurita led personalized tours.

THE SCENE Partygoers like Studio Gild Design principals Jennie Bishop and Melissa Benham were able to peruse cutting-edge technology from brands such as Viking Range, arranged in Chicagocentric vignettes.

THE PERKS To demonstrate the importance of the home kitchen, Laurita (who is also a celebrity chef) went to work in the space, whipping up some of his signature seafood risotto—to share, of course. —Jaelyn Jermyn
